Short description of the project, including its aims	This is a democratic engagement project to be conducted in conjunction with other European Community organisations, to look into the impact of migration on migrants and receiving communities. Its aim is to create links and to celebrate all the diversity of cultures involved. We would make maximum use of existing liaison structures and facilitation groups within the community. We wish the concept of challenge to be acknowledged within the project.
Role of the partner organisation in the project	To replicate the process with other population centres the processes involved in constructing links to newer migrant groups and appreciating existing cross-cultural connections. Allow a broad-based interpretation of definition in order to facilitate differences of experience.
Comments from the applicant	Claremorris is one of the fastest growing small towns in Ireland. Our community has grown by 73% since 2004. Most of this increase can be seen in a population increase of New-Irish. This change has impacted on the schools, social services, community organisations, social interactivity, etc. It has changed an area which was mono-cultural into a multi-cultural one. To some this is a positive, to others a negative. We wish to reflect this dichotomy in tackling the reality of migration in our community whether that migration may derive from economic or asylum causes.
